

To imitate the boss's style is the height of devotion

Chapter 2

Achieve Absolute Subservience

Unlike volleyball and basketball, stature doesn't make any difference in obtaining success in the brotherhood. On the contrary: the shorter the member is the better. And for one obvious reason: It's good for the boss's ego to look down on others, and obviously will give him a feeling of superiority... Besides, when the member of the brotherhood is short, there isn't any risk of blocking the boss in television shots or photography for the papers, unless of course the boss is a real dwarf...

If the boss is the same height or a little shorter, try using very flat-bottomed shoes and when you're near him, bend your knees slightly but unnoticeably so you can be in the position of looking up to your hero...

To imitate the boss's style is the height of devotion. This absolute subservience takes the boss to an absolute orgasm...

Creativity is fundamental. If the member of the brotherhood has no capacity to invent remarkable stories to exalt the boss, it would be better to quit this activity. But one must be careful with exaggerations, like "The boss is the best fucker I've ever known."

Avoiding embarrassing the boss—especially if his manhood in reality is lazy and he spends the whole night trying to do what came easily all night long in the good old days... They mustn't be unlikely stories, but credible ones, though false of course. For example: his incredible fight against three rapists to defend the virginity of his girlfriend, forcing the hoods to flee using his martial arts practices (even if he's never even seen a Bruce Lee movie)...At first, this lie about his false heroism may leave the boss embarrassed, but after he has heard it a few times he will end up incorporating it into his own fantasies and may even begin to elaborate on the details. At least, when someone has that kind of fame he may avoid actual provocations and aggression...

After all, to exalt the boss and make him happy, to hell with the facts, the most important thing is the version created by the member of the brotherhood...